

HELPFULNESS SCENARIOS

SCENARIO 1

It is the last week of the term and it has been really busy in school. Everyone is tired – the children and the teachers too. There is only an hour left in the day and there is so much that has to be done. Homework needs to be handed out, certificates need to be awarded, house points need to be collected, tables need to be tidied, the bookshelf needs organising etc.

SCENARIO 2

One of the children in your class is very quiet today. This is very unusual for them and you are a little worried. In the playground you notice that they are not playing with their usual friends. The child is getting involved in some activities that are against the school rules.

SCENARIO 3

You have a whole class assembly at the end of the month. Your teacher has given you all a script to look at and has begun to hand out parts. Your teacher has worked really hard on this but there is still so much to do and he/she is away on a course for three days. He/she has not even had chance to invite parents or other teachers and classes to watch your performance.
