LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

Children will perform their version of 'Everyone Knows What the Dragon Looks Like' to the rest of the class. Children will use relevant actions and speak confidently. The 'audience' will show respect to the performers by watching carefully and applauding when appropriate.

Suggested Resources:

Copies of the script, props that children bring in from home/use in the classroom to support their performance.

Suggested Activities:

Organise children into their groups and give them 10 minutes to practise their performance using their props. After this, seat children in a suitable space to act as the audience (either in their chairs or to one side of a hall). How can we show respect as an audience? Ask each group to take it in turns to perform their story. Remind children to speak up and confidently. As appropriate, ask the audience to show their applause. Ask children what they particularly liked about the way the group captured the respect shown by the hero.

Plenary:

Are there times when children have found it difficult to believe someone because of the way they have looked? How did they act? Would they act differently now?

Character Coaching

Meaningful Praise:

I noticed that you showed a lot of respect when you were in the audience. You listened carefully and didn't interrupt the performers. What effect do you think you had on the people performing and on the audience members around you?

Guidance:

Please show the group respect by being a good member of the audience. You can do this by sitting quietly, watching and listening carefully and giving them some feedback.
