Dear Supermarket Heroes and Wondrous Workers

I am writing this letter to thank all of you from the bottom of my heart, from the shelf stackers, warehouse workers, checkout assistants, delivery drivers, managers and all the dedicated people we don't see (but we still know you're there!)

A big thank you for all you did for us and are still doing during this incredibly difficult pandemic. Without your dedication and efforts, I am not sure what would have become of us. Your care, hard work, determination, compassion have helped in keeping the country going and the empathy for your customers is such a fantastic example to us all. One I shall never forget!

Governments and scientists are telling us that a vaccine is on the horizon and that we might be able to go back to normal soon... or maybe it will be a "new" normal. Whichever it is, this new normal might not be such a bad thing after all, as it is making me appreciate even more things I already have and the people surrounding me.

However, if this is 'back to normal', it does not mean we will forget the amazing work you have done and continue on doing. For decades, we have taken our daily shopping in your supermarkets for granted and we assumed that your shelves will always be stacked up.

This pandemic has not been easy for anyone. We have our families and our friends but we know that so many other people are looking after us as well. We have seen our schools virtues shine through our communities and the determination to make it a better world.

When older or disabled customers had difficulties accessing your shop, you organised different timings and facilitated access so that everyone could have food on the table.

Thank you for this!

These actions certainly demonstrated character virtues like compassion towards your fellow customers, respect towards communities and pride in knowing that the job was well done...

And for all of this an enormous thank you!

Thank You. From, Layan 6N
