Dear NHS,

I am writing to you to show my appreciation towards your hardwork and resilience in attempting to bring an end to this pandemic. You have shown an immense amount of determination by risking your lives on the frontline and taking care of the Coronavirus patients. The super heroes of our day and age do not carry a shield or wear a cape, they are the people who work for NHS. You have also shown compassion by caring for patients, who have paid got other illnesses apart from the virus and you have paid attention to their needs, even when you had to deal with this pandemic.

Thank you for staying dignified, believing in yourselves and helping us when we needed you the most. You have also helped the community by giving Coronavirus tests to those who would like to be tested. Even before the virus you have helped thousands of people recover from their illnesses. From the NHS people keeping the place neat and tidy to the doctors and interventions on patients, thank you.

I would like to thank you personally for saving my grandpa's life when he had a heart attack a few years ago. You have shown excellent teamwork as well, when you had run out of beds in the hospitals, so you worked as a team to have Nightingale hospital built. Your act of compassion and kindness has prompted me to reflect on my future career. You are so amazing that even retired doctors have come to help.

All of you in the NHS are absolutely spectacular! The whole country owes you respect. Thank you for your huge sacrifice.

Thank You. From, Suwaiba
