

Dilemma 3: The Citizenship Lesson

You are teaching a Citizenship session with Year Nine about the 'war on terror'. You emphasise that Islamist terrorists are a tiny minority and that most Muslims condemn violence. The class discuss the topic respectfully and you feel that a potentially sensitive session has gone well.

Later in the playground, you overhear a pupil who attended the session saying to another that Muslims are 'a bunch of terrorists'.

