

Hot Seat

Scenarios

Courtney didn't like school because she found the work really difficult and she believed the teachers didn't treat her fairly. However, once she left, she went to a college where she liked the staff and, even though the work was hard, she had lots of support from her teachers and the other students. She passed her exams and has been offered a place at university about 3 hours away from home. She doesn't know whether to accept the place. It's going to be miles away from home and her friends, and she's worried she will struggle with the work again.

Hot Seat Scenarios

David believes that eating meat is cruel and that animals are treated very badly in the food industry, so he has stopped eating any animal products. He has joined a group who protest against animal testing. They're planning a raid on an animal testing facility where they will break in, smash some of the equipment and free the animals held there. He is waiting at night in the car park to be picked up by one of the other protesters. He believes what they're going to do is right, but he's worried about being caught.

Hot Seat

Scenarios

Samra passed her driving test with flying colours and to celebrate, her dad bought her a car. She's already gone driving around the city and through some country roads – going a bit fast, but it's just celebrating! She managed to hit someone's car as she sped round the corner, but it was just an old, already dented one and it wasn't a big crash. She decides not to tell anyone and just drive away. If she got into trouble, it would really spoil her celebrations!
